1. Purpose

Tarbiyyah means nurturing — of the heart, the mind and the character. Our RECIPE values describe the kind of young people we hope our pupils will become. This framework sets out what each value means, what it looks like online, and how staff teach, model and recognise it.

2. The RECIPE Values

Value	Meaning	What it looks like at TGA
Resilience	Persevering through difficulty with patience (sabr)	Keeps trying when work is hard; recovers from mistakes; manages technical problems calmly
Eeman	Faith that shapes action	Prays on time; recites and reflects on the Qur'an; brings good intentions to learning
Contentment	Gratitude (shukr) and inner peace	Appreciates blessings; is kind about others' success; manages screen time and wellbeing sensibly
Integrity	Honesty and trustworthiness (amanah)	Does their own work; tells the truth; keeps camera and chat conduct the same whether watched or not
Progress	Always seeking to improve	Acts on feedback; sets goals; takes pride in growth
Excellence	Ihsan — doing everything as well as possible	High-quality work; excellent manners (adab); helps others excel

> Why "online" matters
> In an online school, much of a pupil's conduct happens without an adult in the room. Integrity and ihsan — worshipping Allah as though you see Him — are therefore not abstract ideas but the daily foundation of how our pupils learn.

3. How the Values are Taught

- Assemblies: each half term focuses on one RECIPE value, with Qur'anic verses, hadith and stories from the seerah and from inspiring Muslims past and present.
- Form time: short discussions and reflection prompts linked to the value of the half term.
- Curriculum: subject leads identify where their subject develops each value, for example resilience in problem-solving in Mathematics and integrity in scientific method.
- Staff modelling: every member of staff models the values in their conduct and communication.

4. How the Values are Recognised

- Merits (M1–M3) are linked to specific values, as set out in the Behaviour and Online Conduct Policy.
- Each half term, a "RECIPE Star" is recognised in each class for the value of the half term.
- Termly reports include a short comment on character and values.
- Families are invited to share examples of their child living the values at home.

5. Measuring Impact

Pupil and parent surveys, merit data and pastoral records are reviewed each term to see how well the values are being lived and where more support is needed.

6. Review

This framework is reviewed annually by the Headteacher with staff, pupils and parents.
